

As WGA members in scripted film and television, we stand in solidarity with our colleagues at Vox Media - including Curbed, Eater, Polygon, Recode, SB Nation, The Goods, The Verge, Vox.com, and Vox Studios - as they bargain their first union contract.

Film, television, and other parts of the media and entertainment industries have long been unionized because creative workers fought for a seat at the table to negotiate fair wages, good benefits, and just working conditions. Particularly as Vox Media expands further into television and film production, we call on the company to agree to a union contract that lives up to its status as a leader in this industry.
